PlatGovNet 2025

Transitions, frictions and new realities
in global platform governance

About the 2025
conference

Platform governance continues to grow in importance and intellectual vibrancy as an interdisciplinary field of research. A changing mix of competing platform companies faced with various efforts to regulate, influence, or control them and their offers has become an ever more central feature of many societies. As monolithic services begin to fracture and decentralized platform infrastructures, some governments assert their power and authority, and new constellations of actors emerge, we witness more than mere technical transitions and instead realignments in the political economy of platforms and societies. These changes manifest through multiple frictions across state, market, and civil society – between digital sovereignty and transnational platform operations, established market leaders and nascent alternatives, context and consistency, regulatory intent and practice, and between pragmatic appraisals and normative aspirations. Understanding these transitions demand empirical analysis and may require new conceptual and methodological approaches.

About PlatGovNet

The Platform Governance Research Network (PlatGovNet) brings together researchers interested in ‘platform governance’, broadly defined. From online labor markets and locally-tethered service delivery platforms to social networks and cloud providers, we are interested in highlighting cutting-edge conceptual and empirical work that engages with the politics and policy of the 21st century ‘platformized’ internet. We are interdisciplinary, and welcome collaborations from a wide range of researchers (who need not be affiliated with academic institutions). Please get in touch and join our listserv at platgov.net.

Keynote conversation I

Aline Riera

Founder of Señoritas Courier

Chair

João Carlos Vieira Magalhães
University of Manchester

With a degree in Fine Arts and a master's degree in Visual Poetics from the University of São Paulo, Aline Riera is the founder of the collective, cooperative and association Señoritas Courier, made up of women and transgender people. She is a biker courier and cycloactivist. Currently she speaks and researches about care-based algorithms, their development and application in work platforms.

Collectively, she addresses the importance of digital inclusion to enable workers to appropriate the means to develop solutions for decent work, with an eye on Platform Cooperativism. She is a member of research groups on new labor relations, such as Worker Owned Intersectional Platforms - WOIP (University of Toronto), the Institute for Advanced Studies - IEA (University of São Paulo) and the Platform-Work Inclusion Living Lab - P-WILL (Cost Action). She participated as the only woman, the only delivery cyclist and the only cooperative representative in the Working Group for the regulation of platform work of the Ministry of Labor and Employment, throughout 2023.

Transitions, frictions and new realities in platform governance

Acknowledgments

This conference is the fruit of many hands. We would like to thank Pernille Rosenberg from the University of Copenhagen for her help administering EasyChair; Robert Gorwa for co-initiating the conference with us; the chairs Dennis Redeker, Esteban Morales, Rebecca Scharlach, Tom Divon, Charlotte Spencer-Smith, Martin Riedl, Christian Katzenbach and Heidi Tworek for volunteering their time; and of course all the presenters and abstract submissions for taking the time to share their work to the benefit of all of ours.

PlatGovNet 2025 is generously supported by the Danish National Research Foundation through the “Power over Platforms?” project.
